WPA LABOR TO BUILD NEW FRANKFORT GYM

The new gym to be added to the present Frankfort school building will be so arranged that it can be used for class rooms in the future if need be.

The new gym is to be 83 feet long by 90 feet wide with a very ample stage. When the gym is being used for basketball games the seating capacity of the permanent bleachers and the stage will be 670. If the gym is being used as an auditorium while the stage is in use, the seating capacity will be doubled.

The playing surface of the gym floor is to be 45 x 75 feet.

The building is to be constructed of brick and will be the last word in modernness.

A basement is to be excavated under part of the old building so a fully equipped kitchen can be installed.

The building is to be erected by WPA labor and it is estimated the building operations which are expected to begin June 1st will take a year to complete.

The new gym has been greatly needed for many years and surely will be a most welcome asset to the Frankfort public school.

Manhattan Girl A Pretty Bride

Miss Myrtle Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Johnson of Manhattan and Mr. Emery J. Bettenhausen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bettenhausen of Peotone were united in marriage Wednesday afternoon, April 20, at two o'clock in the home of the bride's parents in Manhattan, The Rev. C. F. Schellhase, pastor of the Green Garden Methodist church read the services.

Miss Verna Krapf sang, "I Love You Truly", with Miss Elda Krapf presiding at the piano.

The bridal chorus from Lohengrin was played as the bridal party entered.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father was beautiful in a gown of white lace and satin with a long train and a veil of lace and tulle. She carried an arm bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Marion Polson of Chicago, a cousin of the bride was bride's maid. She was charming in pink taffeta carrying Talisman roses.

The groom was attended by his brother Raymond. Miss Marilyn Bobzin of Manhattan, cousin of the groom was flower girl. She was lovely in blue crepe and carried pink sweet peas.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held in the home for the immediate family.

The dining room was beautifully decorated in pink and blue, the bride's chosen colors.

Refreshments were served from a long table centered with a large wedding cake and decorated with tall lighted tapers.

Mr. and Mrs. Bettenhausen left for a short motor trip and upon their return, will be at home after May first on a farm in Peotone.

Low Water Rates For Tinley Park

Foul Ball! Strike One

Last Sunday, under threatening skies and amid the roar and chattering of frenzied multitudes—well hundreds of them—oh, all right then, there were only four, so what?

Anyhow seven of the Orioles regulars turned out for warmup practice. The lack of numbers was made up by the pep the boys displayed.

Well at least they were all present or accounted for. But if the rest don't show up next Sunday, I guess we have to come to the same conclusion the colored woman had when she asked the judge for a divorce on the grounds of desertion.

The Judge, upon hearing her plea said: "Madam, how can you claim been in jail for the last four years. 'Thas juss it, Judge, he's got good reasons for staying der, or he'd escaped long time ago."

If these birds don't show up next Sunday, I'm going to be suspicious too.

Last Monday night the young hopefuls, under the guiding wing of Sorny Sorensen, turned out in mass to try out for the Junior team. Say there were so many of them that when yours truly tried to bat some fungoes to them, they were all up over the field like flies at a picnic. The playing field was black with them. No kidding. So there's still hope for the good old U. S. A., and baseball.

Talking about the new team. Here's an idea—Lets hold a contest to name it. Every one is eligible. The rules are simple: First tear off the top of an old silo or any Rock Island box car; on the reverse side enter your suggestion in the New Name Contest.

Second: Send your entry to Contest Editor of the Oriole Weekly or to the station to which you were listening when you fell asleep. Third: No member of this team or their children are eligible for prizes.

First prize will be a season pass for Haydin's Field, good any day in the week, Sundays excluded. Second prize: a handsome second hand cracked bat (of which we have quite a few.) Third prize: Oh, heck, who wants a third prize anyhow.

All kidding aside, come down on Sunday and watch the Orioles go thru their paces. Free parking to all our patrons.

The Management.

Tinley Smithy Goes Modern

We all remember the famous poem about the smitty under the spreading chestnut tree and about the merry clang of the anvil, but Tinley Park has a blacksmith shop which has gone modern.

Peter VanBrussell operates the Tinley smithy. He has a radio and manufactures horse shoes to the music of the anvil chorus as brought via radio.

Gone are the old time bellows at the forge, but a new hand operated type of bellows furnishes the blast for the forge.

Mr. Van Brussell keeps a man employed to help him in manufacturing horse shoes for ponies for the riding academies. He has a big demand for this type of horse shoe.

Due to tractors and trucks there is not much of the old time heavy kind of horse shoeing being done anymore.

License Issued

A marriage license was issued this week to Philip Hacker of Mokena and Miss Dorothy Weiss of Joliet.

Plan Formation Of Civic Council

Plans for the formation of a civic council to act as a clearing house for ten Southwest communities were announced this week by R. L. Larsonneur, of Oak Lawn, temporary secretary of the proposed organization.

At a meeting held April 25 at the Community Center Foundation, 127th st. and the Southwest Highway, more than forty representatives from various clubs and organizations discussed plans for forming the far reaching civic body.

Communities represented at the meeting included Chicago Ridge, Columbus Manor, Community Center, Evergreen Park, Palos Heights, Palos Park, Oak Lawn, Orland, Stickney, and Worth.

At present, it was pointed out, there is no organization which seeks to co-ordinate the villages' attempts to obtain improvements and better transportation, or in their campaigns for civic betterment.

May 24 has been set as the next meeting of the council. This session will be held at the Palos Heights Community house at 121st St. and Seventy-first Avenue. Delegates from the ten communities are expected to be on hand to form the council.

Leaders from various villages are Mayor, Bruno Duckwitz; Chicago Ridge; W. J. Grace, Columbus Manor; Paul T. Sanders, Community Center; J. R. Taner, Evergreen Park; William Jacobson, Palos Heights; Mayor J. W. Mahaffay, Palos Park; O. L. Larsonneur, Oak Lawn; Orville J. Schmaedeke, Orland Park; E. L. Cezek, Stickney; and Louis Daniel, Worth.

Chicago Attorney To Address Tinley M. E. Congregation

Lyle E. Pierce, a young Chicago lawyer will be the speaker at the morning service at the First Methodist Church in Tinley Park Sunday. This service, dedicated especially to laymen and with a layman preacher in the pulpit, will be the first of a series of five special services to be held during the month of May, Alder street month in Methodism. Mr. Pierce is a brother of the Tinley M. E. pastor and is making his second appearance in the Tinley church. His first was also on the first Sunday in May just a year ago.

May marks the 200th anniversary of the experience of John Wesley which not only started Methodism but also, according to historians, saved England from a revolution. John Wesley had no ordained ministers to help him and he could not have carried on his work without the faithful laymen who followed him. Therefore, it is especially appropriate that a laymen's service should begin this month of observance.

The special music Sunday will consist of several duets of the old gospel hymns, so well known and loved by Christians the world over. The public is cordially invited to attend all services in the Methodist church.

Tinley Woman's Club Holds Annual Spring Meeting

The annual meeting of the Tinley Park Woman's Club was held Wednesday. This was the last meeting at which Mrs. Omar Ebenhack, the outgoing president, presided as such.

Each officer and chairman gave their yearly reports which showed much activity during the past year. Nine new members were taken into the club.

Roll call was taken each member answering with suggestions for the next year's program. All suggestions were good, the majority of them being a desire to study more of our government activity, the how and why of the way our country is managed, also legislative proceedings.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Walter W. Kester; vice-president, Mrs. John E. Swisher, correspondence secretary Mrs. M. J. Rensink and treasurer, Mrs. John Boeyer.

Mrs. Ebenhack thanked all the members for their cooperation and help during her term of office and told how well she enjoyed the work.

Tea was served in the dining room following adjournment. The table was decorated by Mrs. Frank Baldwin and it had a center piece of spring garden flowers in pastel shades with lighted tapers.

The tea hostesses were: Mesdames Harry Beggs, Brown Campbell, Carl Panknin and J. C. Funk.

The closing function of the Club will be on May 18th when their spring luncheon will be held in the Mickleberry lunch room at 95th and Western avenue at one o'clock.

Sportsmen Form New Chapter In Green Garden

Tuesday evening of this week, a meeting was held at the Green Garden Town Hall for the purpose of organizing a local chapter of the Will County Sportsmen's League.

The following officers were elected:

President, Christ Sangmeister. Vice-President, Will Lorenzen Secretary, George Bobzin.

Following are some of the highlights of the meeting: Realizing the value of trees in combating drought, and erosion, it is agreed that each member will this year plant at least ten trees.

In order to provide food, cover if quail, pheasants and other birds are to exist in this section it was agreed that each member shall plant some seed for food, and cover to be furnished by the Club.

On nearly every farm there are a few acres where erosion has set in or along a creek or fence where the farmer can improve his land thru such plantings and make ideal food and cover for the birds.

Supervisor Wm. Bettenhausen and W. H. Stassen offered to provide a few acres each for tree planting.

Realizing that much of the damage done to farmers stock and fences is caused by hunters who do not know better nor appreciate nor respect the farmers rights, it was also agreed that each member shall post his farm and if anyone is found on any farm so posted without the farmer's permission, he or they will be prosecuted to the limit.

The farmer enjoys having hunters come out to see him and hunt with his permission, but he will not tolerate anyone on his farm who leaves gates open, shoots his chickens or ducks and as has happened in some cases, even his cattle and hogs.

The farmer is a real sportsman and anyone who is a sportsman will enjoy him.

W. M. Knuteson, secretary of the Will County Sportsmen Club attended this meeting.

Clean-up Day In Tinley Park This Week

This week is cleanup week in Tinley Park. Rubbish is being collected and disposed of. If anyone having rubbish to dispose of is not called on by the rubbish collector by Saturday of this week, they should notify Police Chief C. A. Steinhagen.

Schrage's Inn Installs Fire Extinguishers

Schrage's Inn at 159th and Wolf has been a popular spot for some time and has been drawing a liberal patronage and in view of the large number of people who congregate at his place, J. A. Schrage has felt that his place of business should have some means of fire protection, not only to protect his own property but also the lives of his patrons. He has just had a Red Comet Automatic set of fire extinguishers installed. The installation was made by O. A. Rusch of Tiedville, Ill., the regional manager for the Red Comet Manufacturing Company.

Weekly Sales At Monee Bring Worth-While Results

The weekly community sale being held at Monee each Tuesday by H. F. Yunker of Orland well known livestock dealer, is proving very popular with the farmers.

Mr. Yunker cites an instance to prove that good prices are realized at this sale. A farmer brought a calf for which he had been offered 50 cents and sold it at the sale for $3.50.

Soucie & Rusher of Manteno are the auctioneers and Chas. Erickson of Mokena and George Schoeder of Frankfort are the clerks.

SYNOPSIS

Sarah Lynn Dana, youngest of the Dana women of Danavale, Calif., chafes at the well-ordered life approved by her mother, Adelaide, who is trying to marry her to Duncan Van Doren, Detroit society youth. Great-Granny Dana, covered-wagon pioneer, and community matriarch, recognizes in the girl the restless adventurousness of the "dark Danas," a trait shared by her and Cousin Sally Ann Dana, traveler and author, and pleads with Sally Ann to take the girl abroad. Uncle Lynn, wheelchair invalid, adds his plea to Sally Ann to save Sarah Lynn, as does the girl's young brother, Bill. Another plea comes from Miss Pennington, "Penny," adoring governess of the girl, saying she is unhappy and misunderstood. At a family dinner party, Sally Ann first hears of Keaton Dana's ultra-modern wife, Ardine, who runs a roadhouse called the Stewed Prune, and is trying to wrangle a fight with Gunnar Thorwald, Norwegian ace, famous for his refusal to fly women, through their mutual friend, Jim Allison. Gunnar Thorwald arrives with Jim Allison, and Sarah Lynn is attracted to him. Duncan invites her to the Stewed Prune. Sarah Lynn refuses to drink anything but ginger ale, which Ardine herself serves. Cousin Mary Dana Webster tells Sarah she suspects Ardine and her friends of framing on Gunnar, and Sarah Lynn, in an increasing stupor, decides to warn him. When Gunnar arrives, angry at Jim Allison for missing connections, he hears Sarah Lynn cry, "Go away! Don't come in! Ladybug, fly away home," and sees her carried out to the ladies' room, unconscious. Gunnar arrives at the airport and he is told Allison is ill. Sarah Lynn, partly out of her stupor, imagines the sensations of flying, with Gunnar at the controls. Gunnar, flying to Los Angeles, senses someone standing behind him.

"Oh, glorious—glorious!" she stammered. "I don't understand—Am I here?—flying away in the night? Am I still pretending?"—her teeth were chattering with cold, with excitement—"in the Stewed Prune? It's so wonderful—so splendid!"

It was not Ardine Dana, but the dark, thin girl with the lost and lonely look he had noticed at the Henry Dana house, whom he had seen again, maudlin with drink. But now her face was white and her eyes blazed with thrilled rapture, and she seemed to be transported with a wild, incredulous joy.

Happy, triumphant over the success of their trick!

"Keep away from me, drunken fool!" he said savagely.

There was a stifled wail behind him but he did not look around. He busied himself with directions. Where—granted that he must forego the pleasure of pitching her out in mid-air—was the first place he could land her? Anywhere he could get his ship down with a semblance of safety!

Unless he carried her all the way to Los Angeles—or Glendale, which was his destination—and that was unthinkable—he must apparently detour to a place called Fresno.

A stealthy look, presently, showed him that she had settled herself in a seat, a blanket wrapped around her. Her face was pressed against the window, but she turned and saw him and started to rise again.

"I must tell you—" she began urgently, her voice shrill above the motor. "You must listen to me! I wasn't—I wasn't—They gave me something—" She started to stand up, to come forward again.

He made an imperative gesture. "Keep back. Do not come here. Stay where you are."

She dropped beside the window, huddling under her blanket, peering out into the quiet sky.

CHAPTER VI

Miss Pennington always marveled that her charge never wept, even in childhood, but Sarah Lynn was crying now, bitterly and uncontrollably, salt tears running into her mouth, shivering under her woolly coverings.

In spite of the cold, the stinging, biting air, she was seared and shriveled by the flame of Gunnar Thorwald's scorn and contempt.

"Keep away from me, drunken fool!"

The hideous irony of it—Sarah Lynn, flat-tire in the mad tempo of fourth generation Danavale because she would never take a drink! She looked at his rigid shoulders, at the relentless angle of the head in the sternly classic helmet and absolved him utterly. Why shouldn't he have believed the worst of her, seeing her there in that loathsome place, heavy-eyed and staggering and babbling?

"I'm not afraid!" she exclaimed. "I'm not the least particle afraid. I adore it. This won't be the last time—I won't let it be. I'm going to fly all my life. It's fun! It's heavenly! It's the kingdom and the power and the glory!"

There was a bump which threw her forward in her seat, and then they were thumping along over a field, terrestrial again, all glory gone. They turned and drew up presently in front of brightly lighted buildings with a big group of people before them. An attendant came running to meet them.

Gunnar Thorwald did not leave his seat. He spoke through the window.

"Thorwald, San Jose to Glendale."

"Gas?"

"Nothing. I land a passenger."

Without looking round, he indicated

Sarah Lynn with a motion of his shoulder.

The man opened the door and thrust in his head. "Getting out, lady?"

"I—yes, I suppose—" Sarah Lynn got to her feet, tripping over the blanket, gathering it clumsily into her arms. The attendant reached a hand to help her.

The Norwegian ace did not turn his head as she went by him.

"I am sorry," Sarah Lynn began unsteadily. Then the words came in a rush. "No, I'm not! I'm glad, glad! It was the most wonderful, glorious—"

The pilot was silent, eyes set forward.

"Look out, lady! Low bridge!" the attendant warned her.

Sarah Lynn, looking at Gunnar, lifted her chin defiantly and struck her forehead on the casing of the low door, and the man helped her to the ground, the blanket trailing. She raged at herself. Must she always be grotesque before him? Always a figure for scorn and loathing?

"Say, is that Gunnar Thorwald? Feller that flew the ocean?" the attendant wanted to know excitedly.

"Yes."

"Well—gosh! Hey, Eddie! That's Gunnar Thorwald! You know—the Norwegian ace?"

The other came running. "The deuce it is! Why, sure—that's his ship, all right. Hi, fellers!" he

"Did he take our picture?"

waved a beckoning arm. "Know who that is?—Gunnar Thorwald!"

Sarah Lynn was aware of a gathering group as the plane took off.

"Can you feature that?" one of the workmen said in a low tone. "Just came down to dump her, huh?"

"Yeah; threw her out like she was a sack of mail."

"And look at her! What's the big idea?"

A large and noisy element was added to the crowd, pouring out of the bright waiting-room, a man in evening dress, a girl in bridal costume, half a dozen men and girls with flowers and old shoes and rice and confetti, all staring at Sarah Lynn.

A man in the company's uniform came up to her, touching his cap. "Beg pardon! Is there anything we can do for you? Would you like a taxi? I mean, where are you going?"

"To San Jose; to Danavale." She turned round then, coming out of her abstraction, painfully aware, suddenly, of the curious throng. Her face flamed. She gathered up the blanket and shook it and tried to wrap it around her.

"We haven't another plane tonight."

"I must telephone my father," Sarah Lynn said. "Where?"

The bride ran after her and caught hold of her arm. "Say, listen, sister," she said in a high, sweet voice, "are you in a jam?"

"I'm quite all right," Sarah Lynn said stiffly.

"Well, is that nice? Throwing you out like a sack of mail! Is that a good old Norse custom?"

"I want to telephone—"

"Here—I'll show you!" She picked up her glistening train.

Sarah Lynn followed her. "Is this Fresno?"

"Well, for Pete's sake! Didn't you know where you were landing? Yes, this is Fresno, and here's your booth. I'll wait for you."

"Thank you," Sarah Lynn said coldly. "It's not necessary." She looked fully at her for the first time and took in the details of white satin and filmy veil and orange blossoms. "I mustn't keep you from—"

"Oh, that's all right!" she said easily. "It's just one of my wedding! Married in Hollywood and flying to Frisco and set the ship down to say hello to a bunch of nit-wits. Go ahead and telephone your folks." The young man had followed them and he said something to her in a low tone. She nodded. "Don't shut the door, dearie—you'll smother in that box. I'll stand right here."

The youth lit a cigarette and strolled away, but kept within hearing distance.

"I want Danavale 3704. Yes. It's a suburb of San Jose. I want to speak to Mr. Dana—Mr. Edwin Lynn Dana."

There was at once panic and reassurance in the sound of her father's voice, thick, drowsy, amazed. "It's Sarah Lynn. I'm at Fresno. Fresno. Fr-e-s-n-o! Why, I flew down. Flew! With Gunnar Thorwald. What? I don't know where Duncan is. Oh, Dad, please—I'll explain everything when I see you. How can I get home? I haven't any money." She was silent, listening.

"Yes, at the Fresno airport. Shall I wait here? What? All right. Yes; the Californian hotel and ask for Mr. Pond. How soon can you get here?—Tell Mother not to worry, please! I'm perfectly all right. Yes—I understand—Mr. Pond, Californian hotel." Her voice, thin, strained, hoarse, warmed suddenly.

"Oh, Dad, it was glorious—glorious!—yes. Good-by."

The young man came close to her, speaking with controlled excitement. "You're Miss Dana? From Danavale? I used to work on the newspapers in San Jose. You flew down with Gunnar Thorwald? Well, of course you did," he grinned, "but what I mean is, weren't you going all the way to Glendale with him?"

"No," Sarah Lynn said briefly, aware now of the avid curiosity in his gimlet gaze.

"Isn't it a fact he vowed he'd never take a woman up in his ship?"

"Yes."

"And then he kidnaps you in a blanket and—"

"He did not!" she defended him hotly. "It wasn't his fault—I mean, he didn't intend—" she stopped, confused.

"Why did he dump you out like that? Didn't you ask him to set you down at Fresno? But you didn't know it was Fresno, did you? I guess maybe it was a pretty wild party, wasn't it? Do you mind telling me just how—"

The bride put a protective arm about the forlorn, thin figure. "Lay off the interview, Beanie! Isn't it a girl's privilege to get out and walk home when she wants to? Probably the Great Dane got a little too primitive and she—"

"No!" the girl said vehemently. "It wasn't his fault! She walked away from them, her blanket spreading out behind her like a train, and spoke to the uniformed attendant."

"I want a taxi, please."

"Wait!" the bride ran after her. "There's a flock of cars here. I'll have somebody drive you. Look—I'll come with you myself!"

"Please don't trouble," Sarah Lynn was rigid. "I want a taxi, please."

"No trouble, lambie! Hi, Larry!" she hailed the groom. "Listen, angel; I'm driving this child to the hotel. Back in a jiff." She flung her long white gloved arms about him and gave him a painstaking cinema kiss. "No, of course I won't run out on you, beautiful! You just stay here and play with your wooden soldiers and the first thing you know it'll be Christmas morning!"

The young man spoke to her in a low voice. "Hold everything for a sec, will you, Kit? I want to get the two of you together, with your train and her blanket. Boy, is this a wow or is this a wow?" He beckoned to a man with a camera who came swiftly forward. "All right, Mike; make it snappy."

The bride arranged her veil and settled the little lace cap, and thrust her arm through Sarah Lynn's. "Come along, babe! Well, will you look who's here!"

Sarah Lynn glanced up. There was a soft explosion, a dazzling flash.

"Click!" the reporter said gleefully. "It's a knockout!"

"Oh!" Sarah Lynn cried out in panic. "Did he take our picture? He mustn't! My mother would be—"

"Don't you worry! I know how his stuff turns out—we might as well be a couple Native Belles of Mo-zamee village. Here we are, hon!" She shepherded Sarah Lynn to a car garlanded with white streamers. "Californian hotel, Tommy, my lad, and let 'er step!"

The instant they were out of hearing the youth hung himself upon the telephone and shouted a number.

"Hello! Nick? Say, feller, just pin the ol' ears back and listen! What a story! Ready? Gunnar Thorwald, Norwegian ace, who has just flown the Atlantic, and who had taken a vow never to fly a woman in his ship, set the Hermod down at Fresno at 2:45 a. m. and unceremoniously landed Miss Sarah Dana, of the famous Danavale colony, exclusive suburb—he drew a reviving breath and went on—"of San Jose, and I got a picture that's a honey—the gal in a formal and a blanket—blanket, yeah, b-l-a-n-k-e-t, standing beside Kitty Medill, Wild Woman of the Air, Hollywood's stunt-flyingest fool and her nth bridegroom!"

The big and beautiful lobby of the Hotel Californian was dimly lit and drowsy, the exquisite Regency cocktail room was asleep, but the man behind the desk was wide-awake and cordial.

"Why, hello, Miss Medill!" Then he laughed. "Beg pardon! I mean, Mrs. Van Dalton!"

"Old stuff, big boy. Don't you ever read the papers? Sure, I'm another bride. I checked the groom out at the field while I brought you a customer. This is Miss Dana from up north. She was flying to Los and changed her mind, and she wants to stay till her folks come for her. Make her comfortable, will you?"

"Gladly!" His puzzled gaze went from her bridal finery to Sarah Lynn's blanket. "Will you register, Miss Dana?" A buzzer sounded behind him and he turned to answer the telephone. "Yes, Mr. Pond?—just arrived this minute. Very well, Mr. Pond." He turned back to them. "Miss Dana, your father telephoned. Mr. and Mrs. Pond will be right down. Won't you have a chair?"

"Then everything's jake, and here goes the bride!" She waved aside Sarah Lynn's stammered thanks with a heavily jeweled, well-decorated hand which was slightly grimey. "You tell your Big Swede I don't like his fireman's hat! Tell him all the regulars over here wear boudoir caps." She gave her a comradely hug. "Don't let it get you down, dearie! 'By!' She spread out her satin train, dropped her eyes with maidenly reserve, folded her hands and went out of the lobby with slow and timid steps, balancing uncertainly on the balls of her feet at every pace, humming tenderly—"Here comes the bride—"

The hotel man and his wife came hurrying down immediately, kind, concerned. Mr. Pond understood perfectly; her father had explained the situation and asked them to make her at home until he arrived; it was a privilege to be of some slight service to her father's daughter.

Usefulness of Tin Cans Just Begun When Empty; Serve Many Purposes

Deep in Inner Mongolia, across the wastes of the Gobi desert, there is a monastery with a glistening gold roof. Well, anyway, it looks like gold from a distance.

Roy Chapman Andrews, the famous explorer, thought it was until, on approaching closer, he found that the roofing materials had come from Bayonne, N. J., rather than some hidden mine in the desert, says the United States Steel News.

The roof was made of tin kerosene cans, hammered flat. Rust from the uncoated edges gave it its golden appearance.

In the same part of the world, in the remote sections of Manchukuo, the railroads are sometimes plagued with bandit trouble. The guards assigned to protect the trains and passengers have developed a new type of armored shelter—baled tin cans.

The cans are dried by heat, then crushed into bundles or bales by large presses and used for the construction of bulletproof block houses.

The list of odd uses for tin cans, which crop up in the most unexpected places, is almost endless. There are, for instance, the Chinese morticians in San Francisco who use tin cans to ship back to China the ashes of Chinese who want to be buried in the homeland.

Nor can we forget the compressed tin cans which are used instead of crushed rock in building roads in West Palm Beach, Fla., nor the baled cans with which the bed of the Los Angeles river is "paved" to prevent it undercutting its banks.

In South America, purchasers of canned goods in large quantities demand tall, six-gallon cans, because they have a cash value of 50 cents each as water carriers. After the natives have punched holes in the top, to insert the pole on which the can is carried, it will still hold five gallons of water.

Ventriloquism

Voice cannot be produced by a ventriloquist in the stomach or anywhere except in the larynx. In ventriloquism the speaker takes a full breath, keeps the muscles of the chest, neck, lower jaw and lips as motionless as possible, and speaks with the mouth almost closed and the glottis narrowed, not allowing the air to escape through the nose. The lower lip is slightly retracted and rested against the upper teeth and the tongue articulations are greatly altered. Much of the deception depends on suggestion as to the source of the sounds.

Hard Nut to Crack

Despite the vast literature on seeds and seed dispersal, the botanical world does not yet know how Brazil nuts propagate naturally, because they grow—in groups of about a dozen—in a hard, thick, woody case which, so far as is known, can only be opened by the hand of man.—Collier's Weekly.

ARE YOU ONLY A ¾ WIFE?

Men can never understand a three-quarter wife—a wife who is lovable for three weeks of the month—but a hell-cat the fourth. No matter how your back aches—no matter how loudly your nerves scream—don't take it out on your husband. For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure. Make a note NOW to get a bottle of Pinkham's today WITHOUT FAIL from your druggist—more than a million women have written in letters reporting benefit. Why not try LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND?

Hidden Benefits

Few housewives realize the underlying advantage of the use of a good light-oil furniture polish! Most polish is used only for the luster it bestows on the chairs, tables, piano, woodwork in the home. Rubbing the polish on cleans the furniture—works up a glow—and the outward effect is fresh and sparkling! But that is only part of the housewife's reward. For out of this domestic routine comes definite benefit to the furniture! A reputable polish, with a light oil base, does what is known as "feeding" the finish. The "massage" causes the oil to penetrate, seep into the pores of the wood—just enough to lubricate—and keep it healthy! Here, it is important to note that cheap polishes are made with a heavy oil base—and are "greasy" and unpleasant to use. The best polish—made with a fine light-oil base—is never greasy. Applied on a damp cloth (according to directions), it is neat to use and proves a boon to the furniture! Lack of polishing—or the use of a poor polish—will cause the finest wood to dry out, crack, split—for wood is a product of Nature and needs a certain amount of oily moistness. So polish the furniture regularly! Use a quality oil polish—it pays! For not only does the furniture look better—it is better! Its life is preserved!

FREEDOM OF SPEECH

"Freedom of the press may protect criticism and agitation for modification or repeal of laws, but it does not extend to protection of him who counsels and encourages the violation of the law as it exists. The Constitution was adopted to preserve our government, not to serve as a protecting screen for those who, while claiming its privileges, seek to destroy it."—Supreme Court of the United States, in Milwaukee Publishing Company v. In King's Drawing Room

During the reign of terror in France in the early 1790s the prisons of Paris presented a scene seldom witnessed in history. In the evening the aristocrats of both sexes assembled in the common jail room—always called by them the drawing room—powdered and elegantly dressed; saluted one another by their former noble names, played cards and chess just as though they were assembled in the king's palace.

STUDENTS JOIN

V. F. W. PEACE CAMPAIGN

The student bodies of colleges and universities throughout the country are joining in the "Keep America out of war" petition campaign being sponsored here and elsewhere by the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States.

Colleges in virtually every state are cooperating in the campaign to obtain 25 million signatures of American citizens on petitions addressed to Congress to enact legislation that will keep America out of war.

Besides college students, American citizens by the million, church groups, civic societies, patriotic and historical organizations and others are endorsing the peace movement.

More than 200,000 of the petitions, each containing space for 70 signatures, already have been distributed in every state from National V. F. W. Headquarters in Kansas City, Mo.

TINLEY PARK

The Walther League of the Coopers Grove Lutheran church presented their play "Bound to Mary" to a full house at the Tinley Park school auditorium Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Charles Nielsen who has been a patient in St. Francis hospital in Blue Island returned home on Saturday. She is improving nicely.

The many friends of Mr. G. Dini and Mrs. Louis Hermesmyer were quite surprised to learn last week that they have been married since January. Mr. and Mrs. Dini have gone to housekeeping in the dwelling recently vacated by the Lanham family. The many friends of the couple wish them much happiness.

Wm. Nielsen of Chicago, came to Tinley Park, Wednesday to make his home with the C. Andres family. Mr. Nielsen's wife died some time ago.

The Tinley Park Board of Education will meet next Monday night. Dr. and Mrs. Enoch of Chicago moved to Tinley Park. Dr. Enoch is operating a dental office in the Geo. Schreiber building.

The Tinley Band Parents Association is planning to launch a drive in the near future for more members. The Ladies Aid of the Zion Lutheran church will meet in monthly session May 11th.

The Ladies Aid of the Tinley Zion Lutheran church will hold a bazaar and bunco at the school gym on Wednesday evening, May 4th at 8 p. m.

Mr. and Mrs. Edw. Oldendorf left last Monday for a trip to Wisner, Neb., to visit with the latter's parents. They expect to be gone about two weeks.

R. N. A. Card Party Success. The Tinley Park R. N. A. held their card and bunco party Tuesday evening, April 26th in the school auditorium. It was very well attended.

The candlewick bedspread was awarded to Mrs. Zylpha Johnson. The beautiful lamp was donated by Hirsch Bros., and was awarded to Mr. Harry Mager, and Mrs. Martha Dunn claimed the 5 gallons of motor oil which was donated by Harry Clarke. The committee which helped make our party a success is to be congratulated for their good work.

Our next meeting will be May 10. The social committee is made up of Mrs. Leila Moss, chairman, Mrs. Anna Mesenbrink, Mrs. Frieda Hollwedel and Mrs. Elizabeth Andres.

Mrs. W. B. Combs and Mrs. Frank Baldwin were guests last Friday of the Joliet Woman's Club at their Garden Department meeting.

GARDEN CLUB NEWS

The Tinley Park Garden Club met in the home of Mrs. Geo. Hartman on Thursday April 21 with the president Mrs. Frank Menke presiding.

Among the correspondence was a notice from the Chicago Evening American, calling to our attention a new Garden Column, written by Lina Lee, which will be of interest to all gardeners. Watch for it.

Anyone desiring to further their knowledge of dahlias will have the opportunity by attending a program given by the Dahlia Society, at Midlothian on May 14 at 8 p. m., in the school auditorium.

Mrs. R. J. Hug, Program chairman, supplied each member with a package of zinnia seed, with instructions to all plant them on the same day, which is, June 1st, and in September will stage a miniature flower show, for members only, at which time prizes and ribbons will be awarded to the members exhibiting the best blooms.

All members were sincere in their greetings to Mrs. Combs who is back with us after an illness. And to those members who are ill, we send our sincere greetings for a speedy recovery.

At the close of the meeting, the hostess served cake and coffee. The next regular meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Bruggeman, with Mrs. O'Neil as hostess.

Edith Baldwin, Co-chairman.

YEAST USERS SHIFT TO NEW TABLETS

Bringing the News

DOWN to SIZE

BIG NEWS STORIES often keep alive for weeks or months until readers are confused or overwhelmed by the mass of printed detail. Occasionally readers fail to grasp the true aspects of such a story when it comes to a head, because they missed the earlier developments. Typical news of this sort were the Hauptmann case before it came to trial; the Italo-Ethiopian fracas; Philippine independence and old-age security legislation.

WILLIAM C. UTLEY, whose syndicated articles appear regularly in this newspaper, analyzes each case of this kind. In a single story he presents all the facts that are essential to enable the reader to conclude for himself what the outcome should be. He covers sport as well as government, business as well as every-day life. You'll find his work anything but dull—it will often give you a chuckle.

BAPTIST GOSPEL MISSION Held in District 156A School House Lincoln Estates

Sunday school 2:30 p. m.
Gospel message 3:30 p. m.

Do you understand that Jesus said, "He that is not with Me is against Me; and he that gathereth not with Me scattereth abroad?" Matt. 12:30. Jesus said, "I am the way." John 14:16.

The church's empty pew has an eloquent tongue. Though its message is unpleasant, it is one that all men hear. Our empty pew declares aloud that we do not properly appreciate the Word of God. We are telling everybody that we are not heart and soul interested in the one thing needful. Our empty pew tells everybody that we think more of this world than we do of heaven.

The empty pews tell the unchurched that many who claim to be church people do not place Christ first in their lives. Is your pew empty?

There's a Christian welcome here.

CATHOLIC CHURCH Lincoln Estates Sundays, Holy Mass at 8.30 a. m.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Probation After Death" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, April 24.

The Golden Text was, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live" (John 5:25).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. To an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you. Who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time" (I Peter 1:3-5).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Jesus' unchanged physical condition after what seemed to be death was followed by his exaltation above all material conditions; and this exaltation explained his ascension, and revealed unmistakably a probationary and progressive state beyond the grave" (p. 46).

Rickenbacker Maintains Auto Racing At Indianapolis is 'Cleanest Sport'

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—Auto racing is still "aces high" with America's ace of aces of the World War. Captain Eddie Rickenbacker—he still forgets he has a colonelcy—is celebrating his tenth anniversary of being associated with the management of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

As president of the organization which sponsors the 500-mile race each year, Captain Rickenbacker has had one paramount purpose—"To maintain automobile racing on a plane of clean sport and fair competition."

"We have always given the huge crowd at Indianapolis a good show for its money," he says. "We have turned every effort toward maintaining the high level of sportsmanship on the part of drivers. And we have adopted every means of assuring them the utmost safety in this laboratory of speed from which have evolved so many improvements that have benefited the motoring public of America."

Twenty years ago, the President of the speedway was risking his life in the battle to save democracy. He shot down 26 enemy planes, escaped with his life when his plane cracked up at a height of 5,000 feet, and emerged from the World War acclaimed as America's premier aviator.

Since then he has worked unceasingly to make commercial aviation the safe mode of transportation it has become. As general manager and dynamic force of Eastern Airlines, he has helped aviation become one of the country's most progressive industries.

It was he, as chairman of the Contest Board of the AAA, who was instrumental in adopting international rules for the 500-mile race May 30th, and increasing the prize money for the contestants.

"I want this to be the greatest of all 500-mile contests," he said, "it will have closer competition, certainly, and I see a vast improvement for American motors resulting from the new rules."

Piecing Between Meals --- 1938 Version

No longer is the regular afternoon appeal of "I'm hungry, Mother," bothersome to mother. In fact she thoroughly enjoys it now, because she joins her active little daughter in a wholesome "frozen snack," which always is on hand and is just right to carry through till dinner time. The reason? The new 1938 Frigidaire refrigerator with the meter-miser makes it surprisingly inexpensive to prepare and have instantly available a wide variety of delicious dishes which ordinarily just aren't desirable without plenty of crispy, unchanging cold. Dealers for Frigidaire Division of General Motors now are having their spring showings of the new refrigerators.

«A LETTER»

DEAR JIM:

These warm spring days makes one feel glad to be alive. I suppose you have your spring planting well under way. Your father and I set out some shrubs yesterday. He has the spring fever, and says he would rather go fishing than dig the garden for me, but then I guess most men folks are like that, they hate to do anything around the house.

I did my washing and ironing today and we are going out to a show tonight. Our new Bendix Laundry saves your mother lots of work, and to think I did our entire wash without even getting my hands wet. This makes the second time that I've used our new Westinghouse ironer, and you won't believe it, but I am becoming a real expert. I ironed your father's shirts and did a good job too. Times have certainly changed from the way I used to wash and iron.

The last time you were in you spoke about buying a refrigerator. Pa and I have been shopping around at the stores for a bargain because we didn't want to pay more than we had to for a box. One evening we came across a dealer who sold us the idea that quality and economical operation was one of the first things to look for in buying refrigerators.

This dealer has a portable electric meter that he used to test several different makes and you will be surprised to know that most all of the boxes used different amounts of electric current to produce the same results. Some of them used almost $90.00 more electricity over a period of five years than the box we bought.

Jimmy, your father and I have come to the conclusion that we were not out to see how cheap we could buy a refrigerator, but to see how cheap we could keep our food safely. We found that the Frigidaire, made by the General Motors, had every worth while feature and that according to our investigation it is the cheapest operating box on the market.

Take our advice and make use of slogan of the better business bureau, "Investigate before you invest."

When you come home for dinner next Sunday you will see our new Frigidaire.

Love,

MOTHER.

Subsoil Water Supply A Factor With Hybrid Corn

Corn that makes a greater yield requires more water. As rainfall is irregular and often during the corn growing and maturing periods occurs only at long intervals, corn in the meanwhile depends upon subsoil moisture supply that moves up toward the surface. Corn requires more water than any other grain we grow. In recent years water has been the limitation of our crop yields.

Hence, the reservoir of water now in our subsoils is a highly important factor in this year's corn program. Yet many of us have passed consideration of subsoil moisture with little thought, or have assumed because we recently had a muddy surface to walk around in that therefore subsoil moisture supply was adequate for another crop yield. It is true that the surface remained very muddy, disagreeably so, following the recent snow, the occurrence of which was itself most unusual from its quantity as was an April snow following the seeding of oats by many.

The total moisture of this April snow exceeded two inches of rainfall. There was no frost crust under it and most of us would naturally expect a large fraction of this snow water to sink into the soil. Many, however, noted that with the melting of the snow, the extended period over which run-off occurred and how high the creeks were for almost a week following its melting. We know that which runs off does not sink in and if there was no frost crust why did not a greater portion of this snow water that melted slowly sink into the soil? The opportunity of sinking into the soil from a time standpoint would have been no greater if the amount of water contained in the snow had come down in a rain that extended over a six day period, and had this amount of water come down in a six day rain our experience is that most of it would have sunk into the soil. Then why did not most of the snow water sink into the soil?

Here is where temperature of the ground water is a big factor, influencing the water gravitational movement. Soil particles hold water as a film, and only that water sinks into the soil that is not held in the film around the soil particle. The thickness of this soil particle water film varies inversely as the temperature. When the temperature goes up the film becomes thinner; when it goes down it becomes thicker and is at a maximum at the freezing point. We all recall how wet the soil seems with the thawing of frost. The water film around the soil particles is so thick as to practically make the mixture of soil and water of a soup consistency.

The water from the recently melting snow was practically at the freezing temperature; hence, soil particles of the surface held much of it against gravitation with the result that a good portion of it ran off instead of sinking in as would have occurred had the same amount of water fallen as slow rainfall with in the period of time it took the snow to melt and at a higher temperature. We are explaining this feature of the melting of snow water so that many do not get the erroneous idea that most of the water of the recent snow is now stored in our subsoil and will be available for this season's crop growth. A large portion of it was lost as run off.

A further feature of the recent snow water, with its long lingering in the surface, was the leaching of the surface soil, particularly of the calcium bearing materials that had moved up to the surface in the recent drouth periods. A portion of this is not lost, however, but has moved downward with gravitational water and should dry weather occur will again return to the surface. Some however, has been lost by leaching, but all of us will notice in the more highly dispersed condition of the soil that follows the leaching and loss of calcium bearing materials how such loss increases the dispersion of soil particles, which means lowering of tilth and friability, or more commonly expressed, making the soils tough and harder to work.

As our soils warm the lower depth of subsoil will compete for and absorb the moisture that the upper subsoil has received from the recent snow water. This means if we do not have frequent and periodic

SEDAN PRAIRIE

The honor of winning the spelling contest held annually between representatives of each of the Rich Township schools, goes for the 3rd consecutive year to the Sedan Prairie school, which is under the direction of Mr. W. R. Hollstein.

Two representatives are chosen from each school in the township. At the contest between these representatives the words are pronounced and written and when one misspells a word he drops out. This continues until only the winners remain.

The contest this year was held in Matteson on April 21st. Edwin Feigel of the seventh grade won first prize and Melburn Kampe of the 8th grade second. In 1937 Marion Stege won first and in 1936 Clara Steinborn.

Edwin Feigel will compete with winners of the contests held in other townships in Cook County in the contest to be held in Chicago on April 30th.

rains during the summer season that we will again experience drouth conditions for our 1938 corn growing.

This makes it important to secure a deep rooting hybrid seed corn for this year's planting. The present soil condition also requires a type of hybrid corn that can forcibly penetrate and extend its root growth into and through a tough soil. Soils generally will offer more resistance to root penetration than last year and hence here is where the right type of hybrid "will do its stuff."

Hybrid having inbred "90" as one ancestor and mated with other inbreds that click with it as for instance Hybrid 366 have this outstanding root penetration capacity to a degree that this hybrid is now being called a soil robber, but high yields are only made by robbing the soil. The question may be asked. How can the former determine which hybrids have penetration capacity and are deep rooting? While practically all accepted hybrids are much deeper rooting than open pollinated, yet there are marked differences of depth of root structure of the different hybrids, and the simplest way for the farmer to determine the deeper rooting hybrids is to see them growing in the field and watch their performance under hot dry weather conditions. It can also be kept in mind that the roots that keep the corn plant erect are the water vascular fibers, and where a hybrid corn remains standing all winter, resisting high winds, one can tell that its unusual anchorage is due to the deeper rooting of that water vascular system that gets the water supply for the plant during severe drouth conditions.

It takes phosphorous to make roots and the plant that makes deep roots is the plant that can go after the soil for phosphorous. Its deeper rooting habit is to get the phosphorous from former untapped lower soil zones. Where such hybrid seed has in addition the maximum supply of phosphorous in its embryo to start with a rush the seedling root system on germination we have that jump on the weather conditions that will best cope with the dry tough subsoil that is thus far facing the 1938 corn crop in our Will County region. This year particularly we should get hybrid seed that we positively know has been grown on high phosphorous soil.

ORLAND PARK

Rev. Phillip Morgenthaler of Palos Park celebrated his first mass last Sunday in St. Michael Catholic church. Rev. Father Gorey, former priest of this parish delivered the sermon. Following the services, a dinner was served by the ladies of the Orland Park and Palos Park Catholic churches in honor of the newly ordained priest. Buses were chartered to bring people to and from church and a public address system was installed in the church basement for the overflow crowd.

Sure sign of spring: Some of the Orland lads have been learning to trip the light fantastic at Creer's hall, to music furnished by Merrill Cooper's public address system.

The spelling contest of all the district schools in this section was won by Harold Cooper of Dis. 136 and Marion Peters and Muriel Morlock both of Dis. 135. They will go to Chicago tomorrow to compete against stiff competition for the Cook County championship.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Homer, the former, a retired police captain from Chicago have purchased Scotty's house and moved into it last week. Their nephew is living with them.

The Don Juans of Orland wandered over to Palos last night and had a good time at the Palos Junior Girl's indoor carnival.

Mr. and Mrs. Brickley and family have moved into the house recently vacated by Virgil Smith.

Ralph Miller who has been home on vacation has gone back to his work with the Greyhound Bus Line.

The Orland Park village board at their meeting Monday night voted to adopt daylight saving time for the summer months.

Next Wednesday, May 4th the village will have their rubbish collector gather up the tin cans in the village.

Eleven members of the Ladies Aid of the Orland M. E. church attended the spring meeting of the Southwest suburban Women's M. E. Association held Tuesday in the First M. E. church in Blue Island.

The R. N. A. Juveniles are planning to entertain their mothers at a future meeting.

The fishing case in which George Gee, Sr., was the plaintiff, which was to have been heard Tuesday in the court of Judge Ray Brennan, has been continued for a week.

A Sperry rail tester car has been operating over the Wabash tracks here the past week for the purpose of detecting bad spots in the rails. Several poor rails were detected and have been replaced with new rails.

Franklin Lobe is convalescing at the home of his uncle in Kalamazoo, Michigan, following a recent operation.

Merrill Cooper has been obliged to delay the opening of his new radio store in the Creer building for another week as there has been a delay in getting all the stock together.

Assessor Martin Smith expects to have his assessor's books on hand in another week following which he will begin his assessing work.

The Orland Park Library story hour for the children of the community is being held from 3:45 to 5 p. m.

All the little folks are invited to attend this story every Tuesday afternoon.

May 5th the annual M. E. Ladies Aid spring supper and sale of fancy work, aprons and candy will be held in the church basement beginning at 5 p. m., daylight saving time.

'... BUT YOU OUGHT'A SEE THE ONE THAT GOT AWAY!'

Of all the fish that American anglers seek each summer, none gives a more thrilling fight than the speckled, fresh-water trout who lives in woodland streams. The current observance of National Fisherman's week makes many a tired business man turn his thoughts to those favorite spots where trout are usually waiting to grab at a lure.

Unseen, unremembered by many anglers, is Uncle Sam's part in protecting trout streams and encouraging the growth of these game fish. So that everyone may have enough fish, the United States bureau of fisheries and various states worked overtime last year to plant 6,450,000,000 young fish. Not included in this FOTO-FEATURE presentation, but equally important, is the work done by state game and fish authorities.

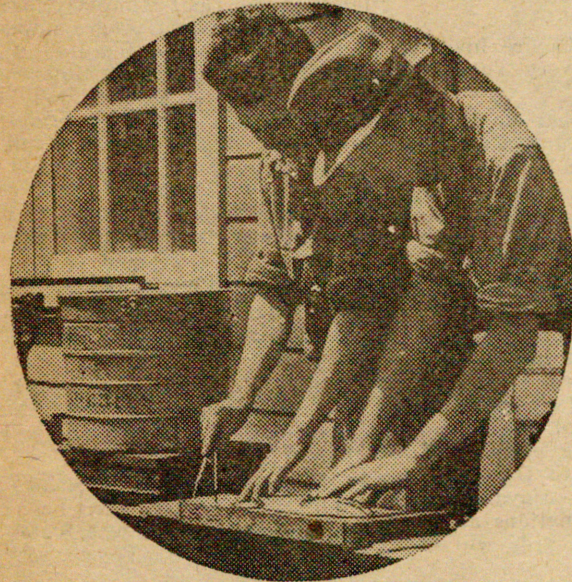

Almost every state has its commission which maintains fish hatcheries, stocks rivers and lakes, and determines dates for open season.

Food content of the stream is measured with a net (above). Other means (right) are used to determine quantity of bugs.

At its experimental hatchery in Leetown, W. Va., the federal bureau develops methods of trout culture. Above, a culturist feeds the fishes. Below, the hatchery trout are tagged and measured at intervals.

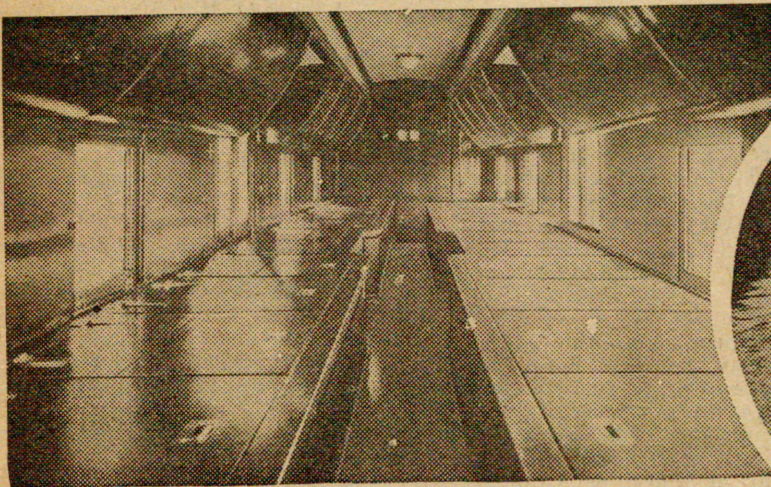

Properly fed hatchery trout grow faster than wild trout, so diets for fish are chosen with the same care as diets for humans. Careful growth records are kept, and the bureau seeks to find more efficient methods of trout culture. Fish research is an exacting work that requires constant attention by some of the nation's most accomplished scientists. Plant life, animal life, geography and weather are but a few of the subjects they must study ceaselessly.

Young trout in the hatcheries are dipped in disinfecting solutions to combat disease.

Above, trout are being taken from the hatchery raceways for spawning. As with cattle, selective breeding improves the stock.

On the way to the stream fish travel in an elaborately outfitted car that carries its finny passengers safely and comfortably. Water temperature must be kept correct.

Fish are planted carefully, scattered along the stream so that competition for food will be at a minimum. Thus does scientific stream management provide sport for the angler.

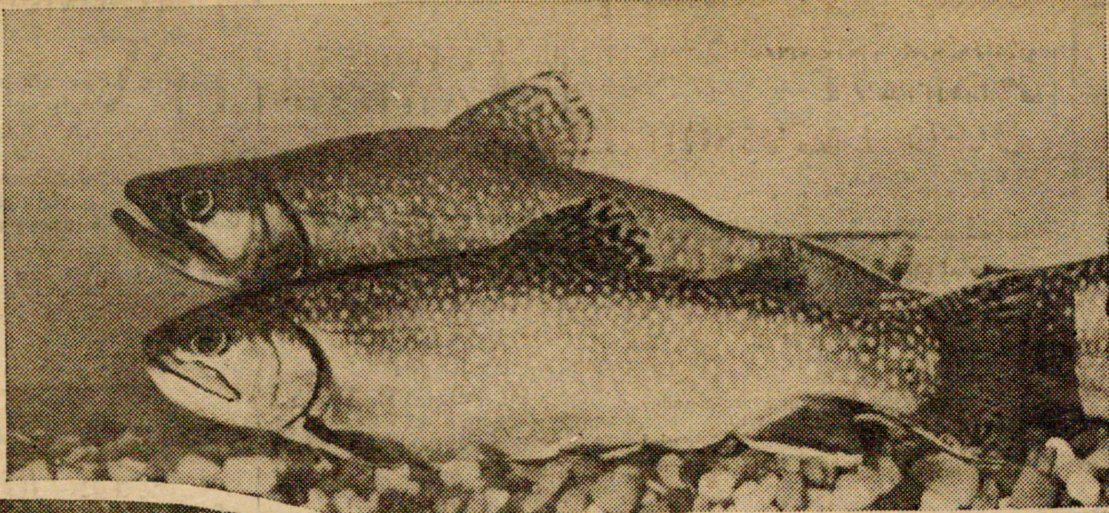

FOTO-FEATURE

Water temperature and oxygen content are measured before the bureau will plant trout in any stream.

Into every state the United States fisheries bureau sends crews which check stream pollution, one of the chief enemies of the angler. They have motorized laboratories.

Above, trout are being taken from the hatchery raceways for spawning. As with cattle, selective breeding improves the stock.

'Living Death' In Prison Cell Told by Byron

By ELIZABETH C. JAMES

LORD BYRON'S "The Prisoner of Chillon" is a story of dungeons and chains, of cruelty and death. Beside Lake Lemman in Switzerland stands a castle that once saw the imprisonment and death of the last members of a noble family. The dungeon of this castle was so deep that the water of the lake seeped through the walls and formed little pools on the prison floor. Sunlight never came into the dark prison, there was only one window and that was high and small. Through it came light during a short part of the day, but the sunshine never came through, and the distorted light gave a wan and ghostly appearance to the interior of the deep dungeon.

Into this prison were placed three brothers. They were the last members alive of their honorable family. There had been seven in the beginning, but the father had been burned at the stake, two brothers had died on the field of battle and their mother had died of a broken heart.

Placed so that they could not see each other, each man was chained to a rock pillar. Now the three of them languished in their chains which were so fastened that their bodies were soon indelibly scarred.

One Brother Dies.

After a time the voice of the second brother, the active, out-of-door one, grew more and more despondent; he spoke more softly and less often. Then he did not speak at all. When the keeper came to bring their water and prison food, he found this brother dead.

The two remaining brothers, the oldest and the youngest sons of the family, talked with each other of the battles and the insurrection that had brought them to this prison. But one day the youngest of the family did not answer to his brother's voice.

LORD BYRON A PLAYBOY

Two handicaps attended George Gordon, Lord Byron: his family environment and his own vanity. Gordon grew up without training, for his mother, being deserted by her willful husband, the rowdy Captain Byron, declined into melancholia so overwhelming that at times her mind seemed doomed. The parents left the boy to grow up alone.

Byron's natural pride was enhanced by his unexpected inheritance of the estate and title, for which there had been two heirs ahead of him. His attractiveness combined with his lack of principle kept him in mix-ups with women all his life.

His marriage to a lovely woman of England went happily for only a short time. Soon after their daughter was born, Lady Byron left her husband, never to return to him. She steadfastly refused to give any reason for this, but London soon heard of his behavior in a scandal. He was ostracized, and fled to Italy.

Until the end of his life, Byron lived on the continent.

er's voice. There was only quietness in the dungeon, broken by the hysterical cries of the eldest son shrieking to his brother to stay with him. But he had died.

Terror, Then Calm.

For a time he was stunned with grief; he lost track of time or place. He was not conscious of anything except vague oblivions. Then gradually his senses returned to remind him that he was alone in the prison cell. When the keepers came and found that he had burst his chains they did not consider that it was worthwhile to chain him fast again, so they left him free to walk about the dungeon.

Then he wanted to see the world again, and he made steps up the side of the uneven rock wall until he could clutch the ledge of the window and pull himself up to look out through the little opening. Across the waters of Lake Lemman and opposite the castle, he saw in the distance an island, green and bright in the summer sun.

Freedom Meaningless.

Then one day he was set free. Someone came to the castle and made negotiations. After a time a keeper opened the heavy barred door and told him that he could now go free.

The prisoner stood alone on the shore of the lake. Where could he go? He had no one in the world to whom he could return. Every kinsman had been killed, there was no friend left who would welcome him. He was still as much alone as if he were yet chained to his pillar in the dungeon.

Lord Byron wrote his poem, "The Prisoner of Chillon," from a true story. There was a prisoner, one Francois Bonivard, kept for four years in the dungeon of the Castle of Chillon, near Lake Geneva.

Following Vision with Service.

One of the lessons that seems hard to learn and to keep constantly effective in the life of a Christian is that mountain-top experiences of spiritual uplift are not an end in themselves but a preparation for service. All too often we come to regard such times of peculiar blessing, whether in the privacy of our own room, or in the great conference of Christian workers, as something which should glow warmly in our own hearts, making us glad in the Lord, and not as a background and preparation for ministry to others. One might just as well hope to feed the physical body constantly without any work or exercise and keep in good health, as to feed the soul on good things, do nothing for God or fellow-man, and still avoid what someone has called "spiritual dyspepsia."

The writer has just attended a most unusual and blessed Bible conference, the leaders of which rightly apprehended this truth. Evangelism was the matter chiefly in mind, but instead of announcing the theme of the week's meetings as "Evangelism" the program presented it as "Preparation for Evangelism." That is sound spiritual sense. We came not to discuss evangelism itself so much as to prepare ourselves to go out and evangelize. God help us to do it!

Jesus rightly characterized the time in which he lived as

I. A Faithless Generation (vv. 14-19).

"Jesus found in the valley disputing scribes, a distracted father, a demon-possessed boy, and defeated disciples." The unbelief which called forth the rebuke of Jesus "is revealed in different phases. There were the scribes, willful and persistent unbelief; there was the father, unwilling unbelief; and there were the disciples, unconscious unbelief. The whole atmosphere was an unbelieving atmosphere" (Morgan).

As we look at that depressing picture of long ago, let us consider ourselves lest we also be tempted to "limit God" by our faithlessness. The most casual reader of Scripture cannot help but see that God seeks out and honors faith, and as we begin to study God's Word with care we realize that the fundamental of all fundamentals is really to believe God. Some Christian men and women are living out a tremendous testimony for God by fully believing Him and His Word, but many of those who profess to follow Him actually make Him appear ridiculous before the world because their unbelief makes Him out to be a "small" God instead of the infinite, eternal, omnipotent God.

II. The All-Powerful Saviour (vv. 23-27).

The keynote of our first division might well have been the sad words "they could not" in verse 18. But now the Son of God has come and the new keynote is the inspiring words of verse 23, "all things are possible to him that believeth." There is no problem too difficult for our Lord; there is no sorrow too deep for His comfort; there is no challenging opportunity too great for His enabling power.

III. Prayer the Connecting Link (vv. 28, 29).

The disciples in chagrin at their inability to deal with the difficulty of the demon-possessed boy, having witnessed the power of Christ in delivering him, begin now to realize that evidently even though unconscious of it, they had come into the powerless position of unbelief.

What a solemn warning there is for us in the experience of these followers of the Lord. Like the termites who destroy the very life and strength of wood—and yet leave it apparently whole, only to crumble in dust when it is put under the pressure of daily use—there are spiritually destructive influences which all but unconsciously destroy the virile strength of the Christian. Prayerlessness is the most effective weapon of Satan at this point. Without prayer there is no power. Real problems are not successfully met nor are opportunities grasped "but by prayer."

Men of the Mounted

by Captain
G. Elliott-Nightingale
Copyright, WNU

A VERY DELICATE SITUATION

The Northern Lights have seen queer sights
And a queer one they sure did see
When one fine night—two men—not so bright
Swiped two tons of coal, from MacPhee.

IN SPITE of the fact that there were outcroppings of coal here and there, and that settlers could cart the not-so-bituminous stuff away for two dollars a ton, some-one went to the trouble to steal two tons of the wretched stuff from a settler's back yard one night, and the incident gave rise to some unusually delicate situations. The loser, a hard-working and worthy native Canadian, kept the news of his loss to himself for several days, meanwhile trying to do a bit of amateur detective work on his own. Ten days passed, without results, so one morning he saddled up and visited the nearest post of the Royal Mounted.

Both the Mounted and the settler realized, of course, that the amount involved was rather small. Nevertheless, the laws concerning property rights must be upheld, and an experienced member of the Royal Mounted was assigned to look into the matter. Starting in on a "cold trail" has many disadvantages, and the Mounted failed to turn up the slightest clue, for it is impossible to identify stolen coal when all the coal in the district came from the same vein. Furthermore, cold weather had set in and, somewhere that coal was being burned. At any rate, it began to appear that the case of the stolen coal was to join the rather small index of unsolved cases. It was not forgotten, though, by the three men of the Royal Mounted stationed in that district. They stored the details away in the index of their minds confident that some day, somewhere, the first clue would come to light. Nor was their confidence misplaced.

Then one morning a chap known as the "Smiling Constable" was trotting his horse along the patrol when he observed a settler, away over to his right, waving and beckoning him to come over. In a few minutes the settler and the "Smiling Constable" were deep in whispered conversation behind the small stable.

"My daughters know the whole story about who stole the coal from MacPhee's place," said the settler, "but unless you promise to protect their modesty and womanhood, we refuse to help you."

"Protect them!" exclaimed the Man of the Mounted. "Why . . . of course I will. Witnesses, eh? That's fine. Now, just where were they when they saw the robbery?"

"That's just the point. To shout that information in an open court room would be extremely embarrassing to them. One's fourteen, the other's sixteen . . . and to go into details would . . ."

"Why 'extremely embarrassing' . . . was it so awful . . .?"

"No, perfectly natural. Fact is they were taking care of a little matter that isn't mentioned in polite society." And so it developed that unseen, yet seeing, these two young ladies had watched two men, whom they knew to be newcomers in the district, very carefully bagging and sacking the coal and placing the lumpy bags in a grain-box wagon. The girls not only identified the robbers, but also described the grain bags, the horses, the harness, the grain-box, and so on, and they clinched their story by asserting that they saw everything quite plainly because at the time the northern lights had broken out brilliant and strong and there were moments when they could, they declared, have read a newspaper quite comfortably at two o'clock that morning. Within 24 hours the culprits were arrested and two days later the case came up for trial. Meanwhile the prisoners had hired a lawyer who had for some time been under observation by the Mounted because of his sharp and unethical practices.

The Royal Mounted established their charges. The shyler then started shouting for witnesses, but the Royal Mounted objected. The judge demanded explanations. The Man of the Mounted prosecuting the case asked the judge to step down from the bench for a moment. His honor complied, and the mounted policeman was soon whispering closely into the judge's ear. The judge resumed his seat, at which the shyler began a display of tantrums. Finally, the lawyer ran out of breath and words, and the judge asked if he were finished.

"Yes . . . I am . . . but what does your so-called British law amount to when witnesses are forbidden to take the stand?" he shouted.

"Why, my dear sir," smiled his honor, "it amounts to 18 months for your clients, imprisonment at hard labor, and if you don't behave yourself, you'll do part of it with them. Next case." Later the shyler learned why the girls had been kept off the stand, and he threatened to reopen the case. The Mounted promised to run him out of the country if he ever tried to reopen that particular case.

What to Eat and Why

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses LAXATIVE FOODS ★

Nationally Known Authority on Food Shows How Right Diet Can Help You to Avoid Health Hazards of Faulty Elimination

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th Street, New York.

THOUSANDS of men, women and children are alive today because we have learned how to prevent many types of infections and how to cure diseases which once caused untimely deaths.

We have reason to be proud of the achievements of science in fighting disease and lengthening the span of life. But we should be ashamed of the fact that hundreds of thousands of individuals are not getting the most out of life—indeed they are not realizing half their potentialities—because improper eating and faulty habits of hygiene cause them to suffer from that great evil of civilization—constipation.

EVILS OF CONSTIPATION

Someone has called constipation the most deadly disease, and while this may seem like an extreme statement, it becomes justifiable when one realizes the untold misery and wretchedness that may result when food residues remain to stagnate and putrefy in the body.

Constipation muddies the complexion, dulls the eye and befogs the brain. It causes a general feeling of discomfort and fullness in the abdomen, lack of appetite, bad breath, coated tongue, a feeling of lassitude and a tendency to become easily fatigued.

By weakening resistance, it opens the way to numberless diseases. Serious complications, such as irritation of the appendix, may occur as a result of the friction of hard masses of waste against the delicate walls of the intestine. Piles have frequently been laid at the door of faulty elimination.

Do you wonder that I consider prompt, regular elimination the keystone of good health?

Its importance is readily understood when you consider the processes by which food is digested and absorbed.

FATE OF FOOD IN THE BODY

From the mouth, food passes down the esophagus into the stomach, where it is penetrated by the gastric juice. It then passes into the small intestine where it is mixed with the secretions of the liver and the pancreas. Here the nutritive elements are absorbed by minute, hair-like tubes which line the intestinal walls. These tubes converge into the blood vessels and lymphatics which transport nourishment to all parts of the body.

Undigested residues pass into the large intestine or colon, where they are normally moved along by a series of muscular contractions known as peristalsis, and finally evacuated.

The amount of the evacuation varies in bulk with the amount of indigestible roughage contained in the food. When there is insufficient bulk to promote normal peristalsis, waste accumulates and we have the condition known as constipation with all its resulting evils. Bacteria prey upon the stagnating material, producing poisons which may be absorbed by the body.

There is not the slightest excuse for allowing this condition to develop. For the misery and wretchedness of constipation may easily be avoided by including in the daily diet sufficient laxative foods, that is, those rich in fiber or cellulose.

BULK OR FIBER ESSENTIAL

Because of their fibrous framework, plant foods are our chief source of cellulose or bulk, and therefore, our greatest aid in promoting normal elimination. Vegetables and fruits are sworn foes of constipation, and unrefined cereals are also extremely valuable.

SOME LAXATIVE FOODS

Foods with an exceptionally high residue include raw fruits, especially those with skins and seeds; dried fruits, such as apricots, prunes, figs and raisins; raw vegetables; such cooked vegetables as onions and leafy greens; the legumes, that is, dried peas and beans; whole grain cereals and bran.

Among the vegetables, don't overlook cabbage, lettuce, celery, spinach, brussels sprouts, string beans and green peas.

Foods which tend to form a little gas in the intestines, including spinach, onions and cauliflower, are also useful stimulants to intestinal movement.

In addition to providing cellulose, the acid fruits, such as oranges, lemons and grapefruit, act as a mild stimulant to increased peristaltic motions.

NEED FOR VITAMIN B

Another important factor in promoting normal elimination is vitamin B, which has been shown to be essential for good muscular tone and activity of the digestive tract. Investigations with experimental animals have demonstrated that it requires twice as long to empty the large intestine when the diet is deficient in vitamin B. Yeast, egg yolk, milk, whole grain cereals, liver and green leafy vegetables are good sources of this vitamin.

LIQUIDS ESSENTIAL

A sufficient quantity of liquids is likewise necessary to prevent the contents of the lower intestine from becoming too hard for easy evacuation. In addition to water, the diet should therefore contain an abundance of milk, fruit juices and other beverages. Acidophilus milk and buttermilk are especially beneficial.

Fats and oils, used in moderation, act as gentle lubricants.

REGULAR HABITS

It is most important to eat at regular times for evacuation, as this is a great aid to body rhythm.

Have You a Question? Ask C. Houston Goudiss

C. Houston Goudiss has put at the disposal of readers of this newspaper all the facilities of his famous Experimental Kitchen Laboratory in New York city. He will gladly answer questions concerning foods, diet, nutrition, and their relation to health. You are also invited to consult him in matters of personal hygiene. It's not necessary to write a letter unless you desire, for postcard inquiries will receive the same careful attention. Address him at 6 East 39th Street, New York City.

Guard carefully against over eating, for this practice is a frequent cause of constipation. When the digestive system is overworked, none of its functions can be efficiently performed.

The homemaker is largely responsible for safeguarding her family against the dangers of faulty elimination. For she has it in her power to plan meals that will help normal individuals to avoid the curse of constipation.

Questions Answered

Mrs. B. T. M.—Do not worry if your child prefers the egg yolk to the white. The white is chiefly protein, and he can easily obtain protein from other foods, especially milk. But the yolk contains an abundance of minerals and vitamins in addition to protein and fat. Nutritionists have determined that the inclusion of one egg yolk daily in an otherwise adequate diet is an effective method of balancing the intake and output of iron in a child's diet.

Miss S. B.—No, the generous use of cream cannot be considered as a substitute for taking milk as a beverage or in cooked dishes. Cream is much higher in fat and contains less protein, minerals and vitamins, with the exception of vitamin A. Cream deserves to be included in the dietary for its vitamin A content, but it should not replace milk.

Mrs. A. McK.—Strawberries contain vitamins A, B and C. Recent experiments indicate that they rank with citrus fruits and tomatoes as a source of vitamin C.

AROUND the HOUSE Items of Interest to the Housewife

To Retain Juices in Meats.—To keep flavor and juices in meat when baking or frying, expose it to extreme heat first, then reduce the temperature and cook more slowly.

Preserving the Oilcloth.—Bind the edges of oilcloth used for table coverings with bias tape. This will keep the edges from tearing or becoming ragged.

For That Musty Odor.—To remove a musty odor from a room, put a drop of oil of lavender into the corners.

When Painting Molding.—A piece of heavy cardboard is handy for the amateur painter to hold under the molding to protect the wall paper.

Hemming Sash Curtains.—Make the hems of sash curtains the same at the top and bottom. You can then use them either end up.

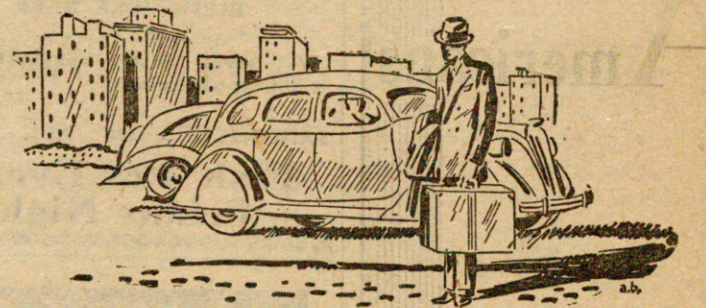

Preparing Baked Potatoes.—Baked potatoes look much nicer if scooped from the shell, mashed with butter, pepper and salt, a well-beaten yolk of an egg, then placed back in the half shell and browned in the oven. They not only look nicer, but taste better.

Were you ever alone in a strange city?

If you were you know the true value of this newspaper

Alone in a strange city. It is pretty dull. Even the newspapers don't seem to print many of the things that interest you. Headline stories are all right, but there is something lacking. That something is local news.

For—all good newspapers are edited especially for their local readers. News of your friends and neighbors is needed along with that of far off places. That is why a newspaper in a strange city is so uninteresting. And that is why this newspaper is so important to you.
